

The availability of Primula auricula plants

Primula auriculas have significantly grown in popularity these past few years. They are an Ashwood speciality and all our plants are raised here at the nursery from an extensive collection of stock plants.

Named show, border and alpine auriculas

These can only be propagated by cuttings and each plant only produces a small number of side shoots each year. Therefore, numbers are very limited for each variety and do vary each year. As a result, stock can be low and sell out very fast each year.

Our new season named auriculas are usually available for sale from March (weather permitting).

Alpine Primula auriculas

These are seed-raised and are available later in March as we have to wait until their flowers show to determine their colours.

A cultural leaflet is included in every order when despatched and is also available from our garden shop.

Back-in-stock notification

- Please subscribe to the automated 'Back-in-Stock' notification on the Online Shop and you will be automatically notified when the item comes back into stock.
- When you receive your automated 'Back-in-Stock' notification, please place your order straightaway as stock will be limited. We cannot guarantee that plants will remain in stock indefinitely.

Thank you for your patience.
